DETAILED ACTION

1. This is the First Office Action on the Merits from the examiner in charge of this application.

Claim Objections

2. Claims 1-10 are objected to because of the following informalities: in claim 1, lines 19-20, the phrase "the resilient body includes a first connecting section and an engaging section, via the first connecting section, the resilient body being disposed on" should be "the resilient body includes a first connecting section and an engaging section; via the first connecting section, the resilient body being disposed on". Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

5. Claims 1-10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over USP 3,782,800 to Remington et al in view of USP 5,292,191 to Slivon.

Remington et al discloses a drawer locking structure comprising all the elements recited in the above listed claims including a locking device having a stopper body 18 disposed on one sideboard of the drawer 11, such as shown in Fig 1, a U-shaped resilient body 14 disposed on an inner side of the cabinet body corresponding to the stopper body, an engaging section of the resilient body 14 serving to engage with the stopper body 18; wherein the engaging section has a stop face and a guide slope. The resilient body is disengaged from the stopper body by pressing down on the resilient body via a finger. The different being that Remington et al does not disclose a shift body having a middle portion pivotally connected with the front board of the drawer.

Slivon teaches the idea of providing a drawer locking structure with a shift body having a middle portion pivotally connected with the front board of a drawer, an inner end 63 of the shift body movable between an engaged and disengaged positions. Therefore, it would have been obvious, in view of Slivon, to modify the structure of Remington et al by providing a shift body having a middle portion pivotally connected with the front board of a drawer, an inner end of the shift body movable between an engaged and disengaged positions in order to facilitate opening of the drawer without having to use a finger to press down the resilient body, as taught by Slivon, since both teach alternate conventional drawer locking structure, used for the same intended purpose, thereby providing structure as claimed.

Conclusion

6. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Bradfish et al, Bastian, Roth et al, Yemini, Hinrichs, Huebschen et al, Vander Ley,

Art Unit: 3637

Cherry, McCarthy, and Benbow all show structures similar to various elements of applicant's disclosure.
